This BCS Foundation Certificate in Agile, offers candidates an introductory overview of what Agile is, its principles, and how Agile is beneficially implemented in business projects. This training course is centred around the four values of the Agile manifesto:

- Individuals and Interactions over Processes and Tools - a business is defined by its people rather than its technology
- Working Software over Comprehensive Documentation - putting technological requirements and developments first before time-consuming non-urgent documentation
- Customer Collaboration over Contract Negotiation - business people and developers must work together
- Responding to Change Over Following a Plan - dealing with priorities of flexible change rather than sticking to the original rigid plan

Agile is a frequently adopted approach that encourages transparency, adaption, and collaboration, regardless of the workplace/project complexity or size. Rapidly growing in terms of business utilisation, Agile aims to eliminate dysfunctional resource-consuming practices whilst retaining customers and promoting productivity - hence it is extremely beneficial to undertake Agile Training Courses to be able to understand and apply the associated Agile processes that are making the framework so popular.
